News Briefs

A prominent Soviet endocrinologist, now serving eight years in a Soviet labor camp, has been invited to lecture at UCSF and the Stanford University School of Medicine. Scientists at both institutions have asked the Soviet government to allow Mikhail Shtern to visit UCSF and Stanford this spring. The invitation, the scientists said, was issued in the interests of furthering international exchange. The ultimate aim, however, is to win the release of the Soviet Jewish physician. The invitation from UCSF was issued by Isidore S. Edelman, Professor of Medicine; Robert Jaffe, Chairman of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology; and Melvin Grumbach, Chairman of the Department of Pediatrics. Dr. Shtern is a highly qualified pediatric endocrinologist whose situation is an extreme case of governmental restriction on professional, academic and scientific information, said Dr. Edelman. The letter from Stanford is signed by Arthur Kornberg, a Nobel Laureate in Medicine and Professor of Biochemistry; and Daniel D. Federman, an Endocrinologist and chairman of the Department of Medicine. Shtern was invited to discuss his research on "Hormonal Mechanisms in Sexual Development in Man."

In looking for a new way to treat chronic heart failure, researchers at UCSF have discovered that combining two drugs that can be given orally achieves essentially the same results previously possible only with the use of intravenous injections. Results of the recent study were presented to the American College of Cardiology in Las Vegas on Wednesday, March 9 by Barrie Massie, CVRI Resident. More than two years ago researchers began to look for nonintravenous drugs to treat chronic heart failure. Before that time, physicians had treated patients with a combination of drugs given intravenously. The treatment was sucessful, but it required that the patient remain immobile while the drugs were given. The study by Dr. Massie and his colleagues involves a group of 12 patients who suffered from heart failure. The researchers found that by using oral hydrolozine and nitrates they could achieve the maximum benefits of both drugs.

SPEAK, (Sunset-Parkside Education & Action Committee), UCSF, and District Health Center #5 are cooperating in a preventive health program for San Franciscans, made possible in part by seed money from UCSF upon recommendation by the campus office of Public Service Programs. The Health Improvement Program is designed to give individuals a "health-hazard appraisal", or forecast of their personal health risks. Beginning with comprehensive health testing, combining the results with the individual's health history, and adding statistics of the most common illnesses and causes of death of persons of the applicant's sex and age, an indication can be obtained of what illnesses and accidents a person is most susceptible to and how to avoid them. A membership fee ranging from $19-$40 is charged, which includes the cost of laboratory work, preparation of a personal health hazard appraisal, and a periodic newsletter. For more information and appointment times, call the SPEAK office at 731-0460 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. Testing sessions are planned for April 4.

SFGH Briefs

A new shuttle bus service, available to any SFGH commuter to the East Bay or Marin, has been organized by the UCSF Business Services Office. Target date for the beginning of the service is April 1. The bus will make at least four early early morning and five evening runs between SFGH and the East Bay Transit terminal, which is also convenient to the Marin Ferry and BART stations. Monthly passes as well as single tickets will be available from Jane Vance, SFGH Dean's Office, Room 2A-10. If you are interested in participating call Mary Alice Murphy at 565-8648.

The Medical Clinic at SFGH provides primary care to 1,000 patients a month, of whom 20 percent have hypertension (high blood pressure.) Richard Fine, Chief of the clinic and UCSF Assistant Professor of Medicine, reports that a recent study disclosed that a large number of these patients have a poor understanding of the nature of hypertension and the importance of keeping it under control through regular checkups and medication. A new program at SFGH, funded by the State Department of Public Health, will attempt to improve this situation by 1) setting up a special patient registry to monitor patients with hypertension; 2) developing educational materials for clinical pharmacists who will participate actively in patient follow-up care; 3) developing educational materials for patients; 4) organizing a patient council, made up of people under treatment for high blood pressure, to advise the Medical Clinic Staff. Dr. Fine is project director for the six months demonstration. Ronald Conte, Pharm. D., is in charge of developing the training program in hypertension education and management for clinical pharmacists.

Deadline for the next issue of Today/Tomorrow which will cover the events from March 26-April 8 will be Tuesday, March 15, 11 a.m. Please send your copy to Allen Balderson, News Services Department, 1475 4th Ave.
